Charles Townsend wins coveted Grammy Award for album notes

Dr. Charles Townsend of Canyon, a West Texas State University history professor who spices his lectures with musical interludes, won the coveted Grammy Award for his album notes in a 1974 recording of the country swing of Bob Wills.

Townsend received the recording industry's highest award for artists Saturday night in New York City where he travelled with his wife, Mary, for an evening of dinner, music and awards.

He won the Grammy for a booklet he wrote for United Artists to insert in each double-album recording of "Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys—For the Last Time," released last year for nation-wide sales. The narrative traces the life of Wills, famous country swing artist in Texas and throughout the nation two decades and more ago.

The auburn-haired WTSU professor, who's been researching a biography of Wills for several years and anticipates publication of the work later this year, was the first artist honored Saturday night during the annual Grammy Awards banquet and awards ceremony in New York.

He bounded to the stage after Mary of the famous folk trio of Peter, Paul and Mary announced his award.

"I want to thank United Artists Records and Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys," Townsend said into the microphone before 1400 persons attending the awards ceremony at a swank New York hotel. "Bob Wills had a way of urging his musicians on and making them play over their heads. I think he inspired me to write over my head to win this award."

Calling Canyon from New York following the presentation of his award, Townsend was almost matter-of-fact about his achievement, the first for a West Texas State University professor.

"Well," he said into the phone, "we won."

The professor, who announces RCA rodeos during summer months when he's not meeting classes on campus, was a bit chagrined that they gave him the small gold statuette of a grammaphone and then took it away from him to engrave his name on it.

But, he was elated by the award and the reception.

After announcement of the award, Townsend was taken to meet with representatives of The New York Times and major U. S. wire services.

"I'm very excited," he said. "You should have seen me hit the floor (when they announced the award)."

Before leaving Canyon Thursday for New York, Townsend was worried about the competition he faced in his category for the Grammy Award.

Others competing for the award were:

"50 Years of Film Music"—Original Motion Picture Sound Track recordings with Rudy Behlmer, annotator.

"The Hawk Flies"—Coleman Hawkins with Dan Morgenstern, annotator.

"The Pianist"—Duke Ellington with Ralph J. Gleason, annotator.

"The World is Still Waiting For The Sunrise,"—Les Paul and Mary Ford with J.R. Young, annotator.

Particularly worrisome to Townsend was Gleason, who is recordings critic for the San Francisco newspaper and an accomplished musical biographer and writer.

"I thought I had a good chance," Townsend said Saturday night.

During the banquet, he sat across the table from the annotator of the album on Coleman Hawkins, a man who in the past had won a Grammy.

"I'm just thrilled," the professor said, "not only for myself but Bob Wills and the university and for everyone in Canyon who had so much encouragement for me. I felt that if I didn't win it I'd let them down."

Mrs. Townsend described the ceremonies as "fantastic," but admitted even she had been worried prior to the banquet about her husband's chances at the award.

"When you saw the people he was up against, you kind of got scared," she said.

West Texas State University President Lloyd I. Watkins was also thrilled when he received word Townsend had won the Grammy.

"Wow," he said. "That's just something else."

"Knowing the caliber of the work done by Dr. Charles Townsend, I'm really not surprised he won the Grammy Award," the president said. "Never-the-less, I'm delighted. Dr. Townsend does honor us by the superb work he has done and we are very, very proud of him and very happy for him. He deeply merits this recognition."

Townsend, who takes time during American history courses he teaches to interlace music and musical history of this country, was present when the Wills music album which carries his pamphlet was recorded in early January 1974 in Dallas.

In fact, Townsend also can be heard on the album when he opens the first song on the first side with "The Texas Playboys are on the Air!" the famous radio slogan of the Wills group in the 1930s and 1940s.

United Artists asked Townsend originally to write brief album notes for the back cover of the release, but unable to restrain himself, the professor sent pages of copy to the recording studio just hoping they could boil it down.

To his surprise, they used the whole piece and also asked for pictures he'd collected for his biography of the artist.

Townsend's biography of Wills is to be published by the University of Illinois Press later this year.

Girl Eagles lose state crown bid

The Canyon Girl Eagles failed Saturday night in defense of their state championship by losing to Waco Midway 60-52.

Plagued by turnover after turnover, the Canyon girls struggled through the first half. The Girl Eagles went ahead 15-13 in the first quarter with 45 seconds left, but the Pantherettes of Midway scored four points in the remaining seconds to take a 17-15 lead going into the second quarter.

Canyon's Robena Johnson found herself in foul trouble from the very start by ending the first quarter with three fouls.

The Waco girls came out for the second half loaded with bird shot. Turning from their somewhat cold shooting in the first half, the Pantherettes dominated play and by the end of the third quarter, the Waco team had a commanding 46-33 lead. With 3:14 left in the third quarter, Eagle Johnson drew her fourth foul.

Tough defense and excellent Midway shooting was the downfall of Coach Bob Schneider's team.

Midway forward Susan Johnston was high for the game with 35 points. Miss Johnston connected on 12 of 15 from the field and 11 of 12 from the free throw line. She was 9 for 9 in field goal shooting the second half. Robena Johnson was high for Canyon with 31.

Canyon trailed as much as 18 points the second half and tried to come back but the final buzzer sounded with the girls trailing by eight.

Friday night, the Eaglettes beat Calallen 78-57 for the right to meet Midway in the finals last night.

Becky Williams was high in that game with 24 followed by Deedy Johnson with 18. Robena Johnson and Louise Davis had 16 apiece.

Both state finalists are apt to return in a rematch of last night's game next year at this time.

Still waiting for state opinion, Sherrod undecided on election

With only three days remaining before the deadline to file for election to the Randall County Board of School Trustees, Dist. Atty. Randall Sherrod, still awaiting an Attorney General's ruling, doesn't know what advice to give potential candidates in that race.

"People can do what they want to do," Sherrod said Friday. "If they want to file, then file."

Sherrod is still waiting for an Attorney General's opinion asked for last June to clarify the legality of the election of Board Member Don Marsh of Amarillo. The opinion is also expected to clear up the question of who, if anyone, can vote for the trustee from Marsh's precinct, which lies wholly within the Amarillo Independent School District.

Without the AG opinion, Sherrod would not give any advice to potential candidates who might be waiting until the deadline Wednesday before filing to run in the precinct. Marsh has not yet signed up to seek re-election.

State law, which has changed recently, is confusing on who can and cannot vote for the representative on the county board from that precinct.

Nor does Sherrod know what his advice will be if he doesn't receive the anticipated attorney general ruling before the filing deadline, as to whether Marsh should continue to serve under a constitutional clause which says elected officials shall serve until their successors are named.

Other local races, with filing deadlines either already passed or coming up Wednesday are not nearly so confusing.

Dr. J. Pat Stephens and Dr. Willis Harrison will be alone on the ballot in April as they seek re-election to their two slots on the Canyon city commission.

The incumbents were the only persons to file for election to their places. Stephens has served one two-year term on the commission and Harrison has served two terms.

Three days remain for candidates to file for election to the Canyon School Board. Two openings are available and Dr. Dudley Moore, incumbent has filed for re-election to his place and Walter Graham has filed for re-election to his place. Amarilloan Jerry Martindale has filed to run against Graham on the school board ballot on April 5.

Likewise, three days remain to file for election to several places on the South Randall County Hospital District board.

The incumbents have all filed for re-election to their slots on that body.

Belief there are no poor here is wrong says CCFSA leader

The U. S. Census figures breed complacency. They say things like Canyon's got the highest per capita income in the state. Or like Canyon's got no minority groups.

The figures are deceiving, says Carmen Hernandez, who heads Canyon's Community Family Services Association. They translate into less than a true picture.

"When people say we don't have poor people in Canyon it makes me so mad," she says. "I know we do. I talk to them. I help them."

That's not to say the census figures are to blame for a certain misconception. In 1967, Mrs. Hernandez says, Canyon probably had as few as half a dozen really poor families.

But, with spiralling inflation, with the promotion of the area as an oasis in a sea of economic woe, Canyon now has about 40 to 50 families who cannot make it economically even though they may work.

It is these families Mrs. Hernandez says the community services organization is designed to help. But the organization can be only as effective as it is allowed to be. If it is in economic straits it cannot aid those in similar conditions.

The primary fund-raising project for the CCFSA will be held today. An either-or dinner featuring Mexican food or roast beef is to be served at Rex Reeves Elementary School cafeteria from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The dinner had been cancelled last Sunday due to inclement weather.

Funds raised through the dinner today will go into the coffers of the CCFSA to aid the indigent or those in Canyon who need emergency financial help. Last year the dinner raised about $600 for the fund.

And, more is needed this year.

"We do have problems and this money helps in lots of ways," Mrs. Hernandez said.

Not that the funds always produce success stories. But, they help in small ways and in emergencies—to help tide people in a bind over until other state and federal welfare-type programs can come into the picture.

There's the story, for example, of the woman with six children living in Canyon, a woman with no source of income who told state welfare officials she had no money to buy groceries.

The welfare office contacted Mrs. Hernandez who in turn called on the woman, purchased some groceries for she and her children and helped her fill out proper forms for food stamps and other services.

Or there's the story of the fellow who works, yes, works, but his take-home pay barely pays the rent and utility bills. A helping hand from the CCFSA funds helps him and his family along.

Or the fellow who came to Canyon because he heard the Panhandle was a good place to find a job. He found a job alright—just in time to get laid off, and he and his family looked to CCFSA for interim grocery and utility money.

Or the family in Umbarger which needs a wheelchair for a girl unable to walk.

But, there are skeptics in Canyon who don't believe there's a problem, says Mrs. Hernandez. Like at Christmas time the CCFSA through The News asked for donations to help poor

Simpson also won't back treasurer

Canyon area Rep. Bob Simpson in the Texas Legislature, will introduce, but will not lobby for or support, a constitutional amendment proposed by Randall County Treasurer Bob McClendon to abolish the county treasurer's office.

Simpson, in Canyon Friday to speak to classes at West Texas State University, said he met with McClendon earlier last week to discuss the treasurer's proposal.

"I feel I'm the only conduit by which people here can introduce legislation," Simpson said. "I feel responsible to allow him to ask the legislature to consider that."

McClenson traveled to Austin Feb. 21, but was side-tracked in Dallas when his wife gave birth to a baby girl. The birth delayed him but he met early last week with Simpson, and State Sen. Max Sherman to discuss his proposal to abolish his office.

Simpson said he will not push for passage of the McClendon proposal.

Gardening will be big this year

As inflation continues to spiral and food dollars stretch to cover fewer purchases, Canyon residents are expected to turn lawn into garden for the growing of vegetables in record numbers this spring and summer, according to County Agent John Brazzil.

Home gardens sprang up in proliferation last spring as the first impact of inflation ate at the pocketbooks of local families and Brazzil said family gardening will be a major enterprise this year.

"We're looking for a big increase in interest," Brazzil said. "It's one of the hottest subjects going now."

Brazzil and his counterpart, Home Demonstration Agent Becky Hall, are laying in quantities of pamphlets and other literature on home gardening, canning, freezing and preparing

Amarillo search for landfill site deals in delay

Joint government meetings are suspended but not forgotten

A hedge between
Keeps friendship green.
—Mother Goose

Not even the hedge is blooming these days in the relationship, if that's what you can call it, between four governmental units in the Amarillo metropolitan area.

And, friendship is more a shade of brown.

Two years ago, officials from the four entities decided they couldn't live with the hedge. In the interim they've apparently learned that the hedge is a political and immovable reality which leads less to friendship than to estrangement.

In a spirit of cooperation, Amarillo city officials led by Mayor Ray Vahue urged two years ago that commissioners from Amarillo, Canyon, and Potter and Randall counties come together at least bi-monthly to discuss mutual problems, to see k mutual answers, to exchange views and to get to know each other better.

Canyon commissioner Jim Christopher was named informal chairman of what was termed an informal group which would meet every other month for lunch.

The fact that commissioners from the four governmental units were able to meet together and decide to initiate the joint meetings was viewed by some as a thaw in the relations, somewhat strained at times, if not among the four entities themselves, then between Randall County and Canyon, and Randall and Potter counties and Amarillo.

The thaw was tenuous at best between the counties and Amarillo.

And, from the beginning one prime issue has underlay the discussions of the commissioners as they met with each other—solid waste disposal.

In fact, since the meetings were first begun two years ago, Canyon and Randall County, after some horse-trading and harsh words, have adopted cooperative measures in the form of a joint services agreement to help finance and operate Canyon's sanitary landfill northwest of the city.

But, while Canyon and Randall County have at least partially solved the solid waste problem for their end of the metropolitan milieu, Amarillo's sanitary landfill problems have continued to compound and the solid waste issue has become a divisive force.

Joint meetings between the four governmental representatives were held until last summer when they were suspended and it took almost that long from the time they began to warm to the issue of Amarillo's solid waste disposal problem.

In fact, one meeting was virtually devoted to discussion of what to do with Amarillo's garbage, after that city was forced to reconsider a sanitary landfill site after initially proposing to place the facility northwest of the city.

Canyon, Randall and Potter county officials urged Amarillo officials to investigate the possibility of locating a landfill to the south of the city with the possibility held out that Randall and Potter counties might—only might—give some financial support to a joint solution to the city's problem.

Amarillo City Manager John Stiff told the officials his staff would investigate the possibility and return at a future joint meeting to discuss details.

Abruptly meetings were suspended last summer after a smattering of commissioners from each entity met in Canyon for lunch and to listen to a presentation on Randall County's

People Are Funny

By ANN BROWN

People are funny, as Art Linkletter proved hundreds of times. They will sacrifice time, money, effort — even life itself for trifles, and hardly lift a finger to safeguard their greatest treasures.

Thousands of poor men risk their lives daily to dig gold out of the earth. Rich ones promptly bury it again in bank vaults.

And then there's the fellow who bulldogs steers from an airplane.

A home is man's one essential; even birds have nests, and foxes have dens. There is a difference, however, between a home — and a place to put it.

When we get a new car, computer, or television set, and something goes wrong that we can't cope with, we inquire as to the best repairman available and seek his services immediately.

But what happens to the new home when things go wrong?

The malfunction is either accepted as "that's life," ignored by one or both parties until it is beyond repair, or they chuck the whole thing and start over with a new model.

If a man breaks a leg, he gets to a hospital as soon as possible. He puts himself in the hands of the experts without reservation. When he leaves the hospital he carries a list of instructions that he knows he must follow reasonably well if he expects his leg to heal.

But that same man would be ashamed to be caught near a marriage counselor. And if he does "weaken" enough to seek counsel, he is not likely to be "foolish" enough to take it.

No one would trust his automobile to a mechanic who could not keep his own car running. But people who seek a marriage counselor seldom bother to check on the success of his own marriage.

What man would tolerate a neighbor picking up his newspaper or filching the milk from his door? Yet he will stand meekly by while his wife and children are stolen.

A woman may drive for miles to shop to avoid meeting "her clothes" at social functions, and refuse to share her choicest recipes. But if another woman tries to appropriate her husband, she dashes down to the divorce court and throws him at her.

"I have my pride," she says.

Pride has its place, but it makes a sorry bedfellow. Pride never paid a grocery bill, and it functions poorly as a father for orphan children.

There are a few laws that Congress cannot pass, and the President cannot veto; one of them is the law of averages.

More than 70 per cent of all juvenile delinquents come from broken homes.

Children from broken homes are twice as likely to break up their own homes than children whose parents stay together.

Divorced parents rationalize that it is better for children to grow up in a broken home than a battling one.

Does it have to be either?

Any two people who will get right with God can get right with each other.

The couple who put God first can work out their differences and create a happy home for their children.

"But I want some happiness (romance, security, peace, etc.) for myself" the partner who wants to break up the home protests.

The answer to that is found in Matt. 6:33.

The world's most divorced woman says she does not remember the names of all 16 of her husbands, but she does remember that five of them broke her nose. She doesn't sound like she's much fun to live with.

Are you fun to live with? Do you strive to add to the comfort and pleasure of the other members of the family?

Which is more important, happiness for yourself and your family — or having your own way?

Who ever found true happiness at the expense of others?

But we still want our own ways.

People are funny.

New Game In Town

By CARROLL WILSON

"Look at this new game I bought," my wife announced brandishing a two-by-four foot box as she slammed the front door yesterday.

"Neato," I said, glancing up from the latest issue of Time Magazine. Our television went out before Christmas and wife sees the death of the tube as a chance to introduce me to the games people play.

"It's called the Divorce Game," she said, opening the box on the coffee table, "and it's supposed to be just a lot of fun. Why, everybody in town's playing it."

"So I hear," said I. "But, look, I'm reading about how we're selling guns to all these Arabs and Israelis and South Americans. I don't have time to play right now."

"This isn't play," she said frowning. "This is a serious adult game. You can read your magazine later."

I tossed my magazine aside. Gun-running would have to wait til later. "MY GOSH," I screamed as I noticed the price tag on the box and did a concurrent back flip onto the lampstand. "Three hundred bucks for a game? Are you nuts?"

"It's worth it," she sobbed. "We've just got to learn how to play it. The girls at circle were talking about it today and I didn't know what they were talking about and I, well, I felt just out of it."

"Okay, okay," I said. "How do you play it? Where's the rules?"

My wife unfolded a large gameboard with little squares running here and there, placed small cardboard cards in appropriate boxes on the board and looked over the rules.

"It says here," she said, "that you're supposed to draw one of the orange cards to establish your role throughout the game."

I drew an orange card and it read: "Woman chaser."

"Hey," I said, "I think I'm gonna like this game."

My wife drew an orange card and it said: "Loyal But Discarded Wife."

"I knew it was going to be your fault," my wife said.

"I knew you were going to be a martyr about it," I retorted. We were really getting into the swing of the thing.

My wife rolled the dice and double-sixes and moved her female figurine 12 spaces to a box that said: "Marriage Counsellor Card." So she picked up a little yellow card and flipped it over.

"It's blank," she said showing me the card. "What do you suppose that means?"

"How should I know," I said. "I've never played this game before."

Then, I rolled the dice and hit snake-eyes and moved my male figurine two spaces to a box that said: "Friend takes you out for a beer and convinces you you should mend your ways. Return to GO."

"What about the kids?" I asked. "I don't see a space or a card that says anything about the kids."

My wife looked at the rules: "Says here," she said, "that the kids are irrelevant to a good game of Divorce."

Then my wife rolled to a space that read: "Mother tells you you can come live with her. Advance four spaces."

We'd played about an hour and I still wasn't getting anywhere and then we both landed on this one space that read: "House is yours. Advance four steps."

"You cheated," my wife said. "That's my space. I got there first."

"Oh no, you don't," I said putting my hand on my figurine. "I have as much right to it as you do. I paid for it, remember."

"You paid for it," my wife screamed. "Who was washing dishes and ironing clothes while you worked to pay for it? It's just as much my space as it is yours."

"Look," I said coming to my senses. "This is only a game. Why are we playing it anyway if it's going to upset us?"

"There's nothing else to do," my wife complained. "It's an 'in' game and everybody's playing it, and it gets boring around here and besides all that it's supposed to make you happy. It's a fun game."

"Okay," I said, but I couldn't see that it was getting us anywhere. "I think it's just an escape mechanism and if I'm going to escape I'd rather crawl between the covers of Time Magazine and become an Arab gunrunner."

We rolled the dice again and again and my wife was getting way ahead of me while I was pretty well sitting on one space that said: "Pay attorney's fees. Go Back three steps."

"Are you sure everybody in town's playing this game?" I asked my wife as she rolled another double figure.

"I won, I won," she yelled as she moved her figurine across the last space.

"So what'd you win?" I asked as I put my figurine back in the box. "Pay three hundred bucks for a game and you oughta win something."

"You know," she said, putting the box in the top of the closet, "I think I'd rather play Cootie."

City To Eye Budget; Metcalf To Start Job

Canyon city commissioners will pursue their proposed 1975-76 fiscal year budget during their regularly scheduled meeting beginning at 7 p.m. Monday at the community center.

Commissioners put off until the Monday session discussion of the budget so they could confer with new City Manager Glen Metcalf, who starts his tenure in Canyon Monday.

Metcalf, formerly city manager at Abernathy, was hired to replace George Loudder who left in January to become executive director of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

Other items on the Monday agenda include consideration of a proposal to de-annex half a street just north of Hunsley Hills. A. W. Lair asked that Hunsley Road be de-annexed so Randall County could begin paving the road.

Commissioners are also expected to approve more certificates of obligation to continue financing the construction of the new city hall building. The certificates are issued on a monthly basis as construction is completed.

Supt. Jerry Jacobs watches as Mayor Bryan signs a proclamation designating this week as Public School Week in Canyon.

Canyon Schools See Growth, Expansion

During the past year, the schools in the Canyon Independent School District have added over 130 students to the enrollment charts. This time last year, the figure stood at 3,090. This year there are 3,222 students enrolled in Randall County schools.

"If the economy holds, there is no doubt the school district will continue to grow," Supt. Jerry Jacobs said.

The past years have not only seen the enrollment grow, but the physical plants have grown as well. In 1970, the Canyon Junior High School was completely rebuilt and in September of last year, the doors to a new vocational education wing at Canyon High School were opened.

In the 1972-73 school year, the Canyon schools began a self-evaluation program and in March, 1974, a state evaluating team visited the campuses and evaluated the schools.

According to Supt. Jacobs, the principal staffs at each school have started identifying problem areas and are in the process of improvement. The process will probably take four or five years he said.

This year Canyon Junior High School received a federal grant in the amount of $17,500 for the development of an Individual Mathematics Program. Students entering junior high do not always have the same math background. The grant is being used to finance the teaching of the students on an individual basis. School officials have applied for additional funds to further the program.

This is the second year that the Canyon schools have been on the quarter system. In 1973, the Texas legislature passed a mandate for all public schools in Texas to change over to the quarter system. Later, the legislature postponed the change for March of 1975.

The schools in Canyon didn't wait and as a result, are being looked to by other schools throughout the state for advice.

According to curriculum director Ruth Holladay, the mechanics of the quarter system are difficult, but it gives the students more of a choice of curriculum activities. "I feel it is one of the best things we've done to improve our curriculum," she said.

The new system has allowed the high school to offer more classes and new courses.

More government classes are being offered and two new English courses are available to high school students.

Involvement is stressed in the Canyon schools.

The vocational education program lets the students work half of the day and go to school the other half.

Some of the high school Spanish students, as a class project, go to Rex Reeves Elementary and teach Spanish to the primary grades.

Classes that are somewhat unique to the high school campus are being offered to CHS students.

Two levels of further development in reading are available to the students. An Honors Reading Program is now being offered. At this time 13 of the top academic seniors are enrolled in the course. The class meets once a week in the evening at the home of students and teachers. Ten books will be read in the course with the students gaining experience in seminar learning and critical analysis.

As a reminder, this week is Public School Week in Randall County and the welcome mat has been rolled out by school officials, teachers and students for all parents and residents of the county to come by the schools and get acquainted with teachers and learn more about the educational process.

Farmers Union Sets Auction

The Randall County Farmers Union will hold a short business meeting followed by a covered dish supper and a small-items auction Saturday night, March 8, in the Canyon Community Center.

The public is invited to attend.

The business meeting will begin at 7 p.m., with the supper scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Those attending are requested to bring a covered dish.

Items to be auctioned will be cakes, pies, cookies, craft items, and miscellaneous small items.

For further information regarding this event, call Alfred Buecker, 655-2627, president of the county organization.

PTA Chili Supper Set

"Chili" will be the order of the evening Thursday, March 6, from 5-8 p.m. at Rex Reeves Elementary School as the schools Parent-Teacher Association serves heaping bowls of chili to residents in an effort to raise additional funds to provide the school with other playground equipment.

Tickets for the chili supper are selling at $1.50 for adults and students with pre-schoolers being served at 75 cents. Tickets are now available from students, and PTA members and will also be available at the door Thursday evening.

Stubs from the tickets will be drawn during the evening for the awarding of six original paintings including the following artists: Emilio Caballero, Hellene McFarland, Beverly Burch, Robert Thomas and Ann Carlisle.

In addition, the PTA will have a series of Laurel & Hardy and W.C. Fields nostalgic cartoons showing throughout the evening in the all-purpose room. Admission to the films will be 10 cents each.

CHILI SUPPER poster is being sponsored by the Rex Reeves Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association in preparation for a March 6 chili supper to be served from 5-8 p.m. in conjunction with Public School Week open house at the school. Fourth grade student, Stacy Rasor, and fifth grade student, Donna Grimes, take an early peek at the poster entries.

Artistic Teachers Display At CJHS

Artistic efforts of several teachers were displayed in the library at Canyon Junior High School Friday, Feb. 28, as teachers conducted an "in-service" session and students were out for a brief holiday.

Teachers displaying art were:

Leona Henry, assistant librarian, who had a selection of oil paintings on display.

Vera Brown, junior high art teacher, who displayed several watercolor and oil paintings depicting summer travel scenes.

Myra Kent, language and learning disabilities instructor, who had a collection of folk art items displayed.

Penny Allen, special education teacher, who displayed several watercolor paintings, and J. Mack White, shop instructor, who displayed a table of wire sculptures including windmills, yucca plants and various antique plows in wire sculpting.

In addition, the library was also used for additional display of refinished furniture including desks, chairs, chests and tables which had been completed by vocational education students of the school.

Gardening. . .

fresh vegetables to meet the anticipated demand.

"Right now people are ordering seeds, visiting farm stores and, if they've never had a garden before they'll probably have one this year," he said.

And, now's the time to start planning a garden, he says.

In fact, says Brazzil, now's the time to begin preparing for planting later on in the spring. Folks interested in a garden this year should select a site now, a site which is in full sun and not shaded or invaded by trees or tree roots.

Now's the time, after the site is selected, to spade or roto-till the soil and add mulch, compost or peat moss to assure a good planting bed.

"They should also begin to select the varieties of vegetables they'd like to work with this year," Brazzil said. "There are many kinds and types on the market."

Brazzil suggests that before home gardeners begin planting, they read up on the kinds of vegetables they want to grow to assure the proper growing season, sunlight, water and other variables.

For novice gardeners, he suggests a garden of somewhat simple proportions.

"They shouldn't be too ambitious," he said. "They should keep it a reasonable size because weeding, watering and so on will be a constant chore.

"It doesn't take a large garden to supply a family with what they want to use."

A reasonable size, he says, is 20 feet by forty or fifty feet.

Initial plantings are underway already on onions, a family garden favorite, Brazzil said, and later in the spring many families will be planting salad vegetables such as leaf lettuce and radishes.

"We can raise just about any garden vegetable people desire if they study the weather required," he said. "They can select vegetables that are adapted to spring, summer and fall."

Simpson. . .

"I don't think the way to solve local problems is by constitutional amendment," he said.

And, he doesn't rate the legislation as having much potential for passage in the Legislature.

"I don't think there's much chance of getting that out of committee, much less out of the House, much less out of the Senate, much less a vote of the people," he said.

Because the county treasurer's office in Texas is an office established in the state constitution, it can be removed from one county only through amendment to the constitution.

McClendon ran in last spring's primary election and in the fall general election on a ticket which promised he would work for abolition of the county treasurer's office. He has proposed that the office be combined with that of the county auditor.

Randall County Judge Woody Pond and county commissioners have said they won't support McClendon's legislation, either. They say they believe the county treasurer's office is a necessary part of the county governmental structure, acting as a check and balance in fiscal matters.

While on campus Friday for sessions with student government classes, Simpson discussed other legislative matters, also.

He told one class the presidential primary bill passed by the House Thursday will probably be favorable to Democratic Presidential Aspirant Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Simpson also explained rule changes in the House for consideration, argument and passage of a bill.

News Brief

A regular meeting of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce will be held Monday, at 7:30 p.m. at the community center building.

Joint. . .

road construction and maintenance policy.

Just as abruptly, Amarillo announced plans to locate a landfill and Randall County officials said privately they had not been approached by Stiff or his staff for any cooperative efforts or even for informational services.

Amarillo proposed to place a landfill just south of its city limits and the proposition spurred protests immediately from rural and urban residents in the area, residents who hired an attorney and came in force to a county commission meeting. During the meeting, commissioners lodged a formal objection to placement of the landfill at the southern site.

Drawing in their proposal, Amarillo officials told The News that cooperation was needed between the four governmental entities.

Still, no more joint meetings of the four entities commissioners were scheduled.

And, still, Amarillo found other landfill sites which have met the same kinds of reactions from residents.

Officials of the four bodies are reluctant to pinpoint the reasons informal and more formal communications have broken down among the four groups as the governmental bodies most involved in the future of the metropolitan area.

Canyon's Mayor Manly Bryan believes the four bodies meet no more jointly because there's nothing to discuss, or more specifically because planned agendas need to be prepared before really fruitful discussions can be held. He thinks, too, that a bi-monthly session might be too often to meet unless specific issues are involved.

County Judge Woody Pond and Potter County Judge Branch Archer can't put their fingers on why the meetings have stopped. But, Archer attributes it to "a lack of interest."

Amarillo Mayor Vahue could not be reached for comment, but one official involved in the four-entity meetings came closer than the rest to verbalizing the problem:

"We've kind of been dodging this thing because Amarillo's been in the middle of this landfill situation and getting the four entities together we're afraid there'd be fireworks and it's been kind of an armed truce, anyway."

Nevertheless, officials of the three units see a definite need for continuing the joint meetings — or revitalizing the cooperative effort at discussion.

Mayor Bryan sees the landfill situation in Amarillo as a definite point of joint discussion, one calling for cooperation.

"There's plenty to talk about," says Randall Judge Pond. "We'll be glad to meet with 'em at anytime and any place."

Judge Archer likewise sees a definite need for the meetings.

Christopher, informal chairman of the group, says he's holding off until new City Manager Glen Metcalf is on board here before trying to generate another joint meeting. He says he'd like to see it "get back off the ground."

Belief. . .

families here have a merry Christmas.

"I had some people call and said that story was a misprint," she said. "A lot of people said to me we don't have any poor people in Canyon. Well, we do have poor people in Canyon. And, we're able to help them. We pay their utility deposits, their utility bills, rent and help them purchase food stamps, and we help them find jobs."

For her wedding, the bride selected a formal floor length wedding gown of Angelm'st peau de soie and Cluny lace over bridal taffeta designed with a high neckline, long Bishop sleeves and semi-bell skirt with a full back. Inserts of Cluny lace enhanced the neckline bodice, sleeves and skirt of the wedding gown. # Faith Chapel Nuptial Setting For Miss Kennedy-Butts Vows

Faith Chapel was the setting for double ring marriage vows read Saturday, March 1, uniting Miss Mary Kay Kennedy and Stephen R. Butts.

Rev. Bill Butts, an interim pastor of Veri Best Baptist Church in San Angelo, officiated at the rites uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stegall of Amarillo and Mr. and Mrs. B.J. Kennedy of Odessa with his and Mrs. Butts son.

Yavonda Stokes of Amarillo was the organist and David Pruitt, a university student, was soloist. Selections included the Ave Maria as the processional march, with the traditional bridal march and recessional. The nuptial service included the Lord's Prayer.

A wooden cross at the back of the altar was decorated with various shades of pink mixed with white carnations and chrysanthemums with greenery accents. A 15 bract candelabrum decorated the area and the profile kneeling bench accented the upper altar level. The lower altar level was arranged with six bract candleabra on each side of the altar and the aisle was decorated with six single candle aisle arrangements of ribbons and greenery.

Wedding guests were registered in the foyer at a table laid with pink and white. Miss Becky Irlbeck, a cousin of the bride, presided at the white plumed registration pen.

Escorted and presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire waisted dress of white organza and sheer overlay with a flowing A-line skirt. The sheer bodice was fastened with tiny traditional white buttons and full Bishop sleeves. The bodice, standup collar, and sleeves were enhanced with Venice lace appliques and scattered with sequins and pearls. A lettuce leaf ruffle trimmed the sleeves and formed two tiers encircling the skirt which extended into a full train effect.

Her French lace veil was an arrangement of four tiers attached to a half tiara capulet of white lace which extended to the floor encircling the train of the gown. She carried a bridal boquet of gardenias, carnations, babies breath and pink rosebuds with trailing flowers and greenery accented with pink and white satin ribbons. The boquet was carried atop a white marriage Bible and the traditional "something old, new, borrowed and blue" was carried out.

Pam Butts served as the maid of honor and bridesmaids were Kelly Irlbeck, a cousin of the bride, and Cindy Hendley, the bride's stepsister. The bridal attendants wore evening length dresses of various shades of pink polyester and voile which were scattered with lilac flowers. Their dresses featured short puff sleeves with simple necklines trimmed in pink lace. The wide tucked bodices extended to empire waistlines and each carried a nosegay arrangement of various shades of pink carnations, babies breath with accenting greenery and streamers of pink and white satin ribbon.

Norman Butts, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man and groomsmen were Jay Taylor of Amarillo and David Barkley of Gruver. The bridegroom's attendants were attired in charcoal gray evening tuxedoes with pink shirts, and black bowties with black tuxedo accents and pink carnation bouttonniers. The bridegroom wore a white brocade tuxedo with black accents, black bowtie and pink rosebud lapel flower.

Jeffrey Kennedy, a brother of the bride, served as ringbearer and carried a white satin pillow. Ushering were Bob Jones and Jim Kennedy, both of Amarillo.

The bride's mother wore an evening length pink dress with corsage of white carnations and pink rosebuds. The bridegroom's mother selected an evening length gown of deep turquoise with a corsage of white carnations and pink rosebuds and the stepmother of the bride wore a floorlength gown of mint green with a white carnation and pink rosebud corsage.

A reception for the newlyweds was held at 1411 Hillcrest Drive in Canyon at the Gilbert Irlbeck home. The three-tiered wedding cake was trimmed with pink roses and topped with a miniature bride and groom which was borrowed for the occasion from the bride's grandmother, Mrs. H.G. Kennedy. The table cloth was pink with a shaded pink and white floral centerpiece and a white milkglass punchbowl, plates and cups were used for the occasion. A wedding gift and rice bag table was used at the reception after which the couple departed on a wedding trip to a resort in Monterrey, Mexico.

For the wedding trip, the bride changed to a red and white pantsuit featuring checked slacks with an appliqued shirt. The couple will establish their home at 2506 Sweetbriar Drive in San Angelo after March 8.

Born in Canyon, the bride is a 1973 graduate of Amarillo High School and worked as Miss Camelot in sales and promotion of Camelot Inn for a year. She plans to teach kindergarten for 4-5 year olds when the couple is established in San Angelo.

The bridegroom, a native of San Angelo, graduated from Gruver High School and Howard Payne College and further study at West Texas State University. He was previously employed with Plains Machinery as a parts salesman and has recently returned to San Angelo to join his brother and father in a private construction firm, Bill Butts Construction Company.
